

The pursuit of effective health safety and environment (HSE) performance can be compromised by ineffective leadership.

Helping leaders implement change – so that HSE targets are realised – is a specialist field in which EDN is recognised globally. We have been chosen by industries worldwide, particularly in oil and gas, to help them create leaders confident in HSE delivery.

This is an essential process for organisations hoping to achieve ongoing and sustainable improvement in their health and safety performance.

Tailored HSE leadership training

EDN provides HSE training and development courses for all levels of leaders, from senior management to frontline supervisors, and the programs can be run separately or as a package.

Training is tailored for each leadership level so people have the confidence and knowledge to develop and implement an effective HSE program that is sustainable.

Senior management

Responsibility for an organisation's HSE vision – and inspiring people to achieve it – rests at the senior level.

EDN equips managers with the tools to develop an HSE vision and shows them the best methods of successfully introducing a performance focus for their organisation.

Our consultants can support the planning process and help define the roles of senior managers in making sure the change process is implemented.

Middle management

Strong leadership at the middle level is critical for an HSE vision to be realised.

EDN's leadership program gives middle managers the skills to create an environment conducive to behavioural and cultural change.

They are shown how they can influence HSE outcomes, given a better understanding of what underpins good performance, and taught the skills to build a culture in which everyone has a sense of ownership.

This is achieved through a highly interactive learning process that includes in-depth self analysis, training in leadership, safety management systems and cultural changes. Options are also available for additional coaching and mentoring.

Supervisors

Supervisors are at the frontline of an organisation's push to implement and succeed in comprehensive HSE improvement.

EDN's Frontline Safety Leaders Program provides supervisors with the ability to translate safety goals into daily tasks, manage conflict and help people use and improve safety systems.

The length of the program varies according to an organisation's particular needs and is tailored to suit cultural differences. Courses can also be delivered in a variety of languages.
